YOUR 100 WORD SUMMARY:

I am going into the second year of psychology. I don't usually elections and stuff like that, but I thought I'd try just this once. My only motive for standing is to get cracking doing something worthwhile and a little different. I am not here to be sycophantic, or two-faced. I have no fear of authority, or of admitting my mistakes. I am not afraid to state unpopular opinions. I am an ... acquired taste. But seriously I would give it my best shot.

YOUR MANIFESTO:

- I would get cracking on making the elections themselves more popular, as usually a few people stand for positions, and not too many votes are cast in some cases. The voices of more students should be heard, and people should care more. If the next elections are not more popular, I will be very cross, and will take responsibility for that personally. But I alone cannot magic a good turn out, but I would try.
- Under my vigilance, the elections will be run in a fair manner.
- Complaints about the election system will be listened to. And they will get sorted. Suggestions will be listened to.
- I will be whatever the elections need me to be – within reason. Vote ... for me – Z !
